

Register of Free Negroes and Mulattoes for Campbell County, 1801–1850*

Transcribed by Dorothy A. Boyd-Bragg, Ph.D.

On 10 December 1793, the Virginia legislature passed “An Act ... to restrain the practice of Negroes going at large.” The provisions of the act included the stipulation that “every free negro or mulatto, who resides in, or is employed to labour within the limits of any city, borough or town, shall be registered and numbered in a book to be kept for that purpose by the clerk of the said city, borough or town, which register shall specify his or her age, name, colour and stature, by whom and in what court the said negro or mulatto was emancipated; or that such negro or mulatto was born free....” A copy of the register entry was to be given to each individual who registered. This was necessary as “no free negro or mulatto ... [was] to go at large or hire himself or herself to labour in any county, without having his or her certificate registered in the clerk’s office of the county wherein he or she resides.”¹

The pages of the Register of Free Negroes and Mulattoes for Campbell County, provide some or all of the following information: date of registration, name, age, stature, complexion, marks or scars, whether born free or emancipated and in what county or jurisdiction. While the format varies considerably with the passing years, it is consistently rendered in columns. A blank in the text is indicated by an underscore, e.g., _____. At the very front of the bound volume is a separate list of the children of John Jackson. The list, in its entirety, will appear at the end of this transcription.

* The 24 numbered pages of the register measure approximately 8 inches by 11½ inches. The entries require two pages and the second page for each entry is not numbered. The Library of Virginia microfilmed this register for Campbell County, Virginia, on 9 April 1982: Campbell County, Reel 68. Campbell County was created from Bedford County in 1781.
